[From the Scientific American.] The following statistics of the good old winters are curious: In 408 the Black sea was entirely frozen over. Straits of the Dardenelles were frozen fifty feet high. In 822 the great rivers of Europe-the Danube and Elbe, etc., -were so hard frozen as to bear heavy wagons for a month. In 860 the Ad riatic was frozen. In 991 everything was frozen; the crops totally failed, and famine and pestilence closed the year. In 1067 most of the travelers were frozen to death on the roads. In 1133 the Po was frozen from Cremona to the sea; the wine casks were burst, and even the trees split by the action

Salt for Trees and Vegetables.

A correspondent in the Chicago Times says: I will give you a brief sketch of my experience with the use of salt in the garden and orchard. Young fruit trees can be made to grow and do well in places where old trees have died by sowing a pint of salt on the earth where they are to stand. After trees are set 1 continued to sow a pint of salt around each tree every year. I set twenty-five trees in sandy soil for each one of seven years, and only succeeded in getting one to live, and that produced twigs a few inches long in nine years. Last spring I sowed a pint of salt around it, and limbs grew from three to three and a half feet long. In the spring of 1876 I set out twenty-five trees, putting a pint of salt in the dirt used for filling, and then sowed a pint more on the surface after each tree was set. All grew as if they had never been taken thirty more, treating them in the same way, and they have grown very finely. The salt keeps away insects when she, in her weakness, said: Yes

I have some potatoes growing from weather became very hot. I applied salt to the surface of the soil till it was white. The vines took a vigorous start, growing to the length of three feet, blossomed and producing tubers from the size of hens' eggs to that of goose eggs. My soil is chiefly sand, but I believe that salt is highly beneficial to clay or to common prairie
